

The book was found

Immigrant Voices: Twenty-Four Narratives On Becoming An American

Synopsis

With narratives from the eighteenth to the twentieth century, this anthology provides a historical and uniquely personal perspective on the immigrant experience and illuminates the often difficult dream of becoming an American citizen. From Hector St. John de Crèvecoeur's defining statement of Americanism to Harlem Renaissance figure Claude McKay's observations on race, here are both rousing and heartbreaking impressions of those who departed from their homelands in the hopes of making a new life. Reconciling their old traditions with their new land, these immigrants faced such adversity as assimilation, prejudice, poverty, homesickness, and identity. Filled with inspiring stories of immigrants who traveled from Mexico, India, China, Korea, Syria, and beyond, Immigrant Voices reveals "in their own words" how these newcomers were able to persevere and make their mark on the New World.

Book Information

Mass Market Paperback: 400 pages

Publisher: Signet; Reprint edition (March 1, 1999)

Language: English

ISBN-10: 0451526988

ISBN-13: 978-0451526984

Product Dimensions: 4.2 x 1 x 6.8 inches

Shipping Weight: 10.4 ounces (View shipping rates and policies)

Average Customer Review: 5.0 out of 5 stars 3 customer reviews

Best Sellers Rank: #355,810 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #21 in Books > Education & Teaching > Test Preparation > Citizenship #649 in Books > Politics & Social Sciences > Social Sciences > Emigration & Immigration #684 in Books > Literature & Fiction > United States > Anthologies

Customer Reviews

Editor Gordon Hutner is a professor of English at the University of Wisconsin in Madison and the editor of the journal American Literary History.

Great book

This is a wonderful anthology of autobiographical writings, spanning the 18th, 19th and 20th centuries. Beginning with Hector St. John de Crèvecoeur's famous defining statement of cultural identity, 'What is an American' the collection captures the 'outsider' American becoming whatever an 'American' is...it's a superbly apt paradox and a fascinating problematic and one that is full of dramatic axis: the immigrant looking back to his or her old country while negotiating the new. One can't help feeling a certain exhilaration at the complexity of the 'American experience' and the focus on first impressions of America is the compelling aspect--the just off the boat wonderment, the gradual disillusionment, and the afterthought or reflection from many years on--- a multitude of newcomers trying to figure out first hand how the society works, what its values are, how each new arrival hopes to carve his or her own world, the constant need for adaptation and improvisation, the sense in which loss and gain function as a necessary interchange, the bleaker moments of crisis and frustration, and, ultimately, survival, though of the tempered, reflective rather than triumphant or grandiose kind. The accounts feel so personal and immediate, full of sights and sounds and textures. It's a bit like reading historical fiction, because the sense of character and individual struggle is so strong. This first person quality is what really brings the history to life for me. Each letter or autobiographical extract seems to deliver such minute and particular documentary detail and one learns a tremendous amount of domestic and social history in the process. My favorites are probably a Norwegian frontier mother's account of her hard lowland farming life, full of the stoically endured pains of leaving familiar life behind and her level headed grappling with the differences that bombard her as she and her husband try to build their farm; an extract from the memoirs of Henry Villard, describing his vigorous, heady engagement with American politics in the 1850s; Andrew Carnegie's robust and unromanticized account of his early immigrant days in Pittsburg; a young Syrian intellectual's memories of agonizing loneliness, struggle with the English language and determination to succeed in academic life at the turn of the century...and so it goes on, though I confess that my weakness is for the earlier accounts, with all their strange modernity (Crevecoeur seems so timelessly on the nail about American types and the mingling of different religions and European ethnicities throughout the land). I wish there were more volumes. The introduction, by the way, is first-rate. Hutner is clearly a scholar of great integrity. But there is no reason this book should be limited to a student readership--it is so full of life and would be a great resource for all kinds of writers, and anyone with an interest in their own immigrant roots. It also has a wonderful feeling of landscape and customs, revealing an America of regions, urban and metropolitan. A great strength of the selection is that it offers a full array of experiences from many different countries--India, China, Korea, Syria, and Mexico--as well as European. New York figures prominently but does not dominate. All the usual cliches of the immigration account (Ellis Island, the immigrant as uneducated and backward) are avoided because each voice is so distinguished, so full of opinion and views and fully formed ideological outlook. All the voices are those of thinkers, and that's what makes this gem of an anthology such a great read.

I just started the book, definitely worth reading. A great accomplishment by Gordon Hutner! I give this book five stars because it's taking me where I need to be!

Download to continue reading...

Immigrant Voices: Twenty-Four Narratives on Becoming an American Finding Your Silver Lining in the Business Immigration Process: An Insightful Guide to Immigrant & Non-Immigrant Business Visas Kids Like Me: Voices of the Immigrant Experience One Out of Three: Immigrant New York in the Twenty-First Century Voices from the Edge: Narratives about the Americans with Disabilities Act DREAMS ARE FOR OTHERS: Voices of the Children Left Behind - Powerful Narratives by High School Students in the Hood The Four Voyages: Being His Own Log-Book, Letters and Dispatches with Connecting Narratives.. (Penguin Classics) Voices of Lung Cancer: The Healing Companion: Stories for Courage, Comfort and Strength (Voices Of series) Elijah: An Oratorio for Full Chorus of Mixed Voices, Soprano, Alto, Tenor, and Baritone Soli (Double Solo Quartet of Mixed Voices) and Piano (G. Schirmer's Editions of Oratorios and Cantatas) Hearing Voices, Living Fully: Living with the Voices in My Head Voices from Colonial America: New York 1609-1776 (National Geographic Voices from ColonialAmerica) Voices from Colonial America: Texas 1527-1836: 1527 - 1836 (National Geographic Voices from ColonialAmerica) Voices from Colonial America: Massachusetts 1620-1776: 1620 - 1776 (National Geographic Voices from ColonialAmerica) Voices from Colonial America: Louisiana, 1682-1803 (National Geographic Voices from ColonialAmerica) Voices from Colonial America: New Jersey: 1609-1776 (National Geographic Voices from ColonialAmerica) Voices from Colonial America: North Carolina 1524-1776 (National Geographic Voices from ColonialAmerica) Lost Voices (The Lost Voices Trilogy Book 1) Lost Voices (The Lost Voices Trilogy) Voices of Freedom: A Documentary History (Fourth Edition) (Vol. 1) (Voices of Freedom (WW Norton)) Voices of Aloha on Magical Maui (Voices of Maui)

Contact Us

DMCA

Privacy

FAQ & Help