Customer Reviews

"Sixteenth-century clergyman Francis David said, 'There have always been many opinions about faith and salvation. You need not think alike to love alike.' At interfaith or secular gatherings, a widely diverse population needs to share a common language of love, respect, justice, peace, and hope. When our faith differences are acknowledged and supported, we are more likely to find ourselves united."

L. Annie Foerster, a retired Unitarian Universalist minister living in Kentucky, is a writer and frequent leader of public prayers. She received her M. Div. degree from Meadville/Lombard Theological School.

Helpful templates to fuel creativity

I share these prayers during our overhead prayer time at the hospital. I have had lots of compliments as they are so inclusive.

Great book of prayers. Especially helpful for folks who are called on to pray invocations at public events.

Love the prayers! Have used several already!

I enjoyed this book. Made me feel good

Some gems here among a fair amount of chaff, if chaff has gems. Pretty limited number of sources.

I am often in divers religious settings and this book has been a wonderful asset when planning for devotions and/or reflection.

In an increasingly diverse world of religious and non-religious beliefs, those who desire to be inclusive and respectful will find this volume a perfect resource for those occasions when they are called upon to offer opening words (invocations) or closing words (benedictions) at public occasions.
