Story, Song And Spirit: Fun And Creative Worship Services For All Ages

Synopsis

Across the country, our congregations are filling up with a new generation of Unitarian Universalists: children. Our congregations are reaching out to families as a whole. It's not enough, in these times, to provide stimulating sermons for adults and (in some distant wing of the church) solid religious education for their young ones. Rather, families need and deserve shared worship that they can experience together, take home, talk about and learn from.-from the Introduction

These multigenerational worship services draw from folk tales, children's literature and everyday living. Hewitt offers new ways to celebrate the beginning of the church year, Christmas, coming of age and Earth Day, as well as services for any time, to engage children through elders. Each service is a whole body experience, inviting members to participate and engage the mind, heart and spirit. These fully scripted services include recommended hymns, readings and props plus quick, at-a-glance descriptions that rate each service based on the preparation time required.

Customer Reviews

Erika Hewitt is a great preacher and storyteller, one who draws from every cell of her being and experience to create energetic and meaningful worship. The scripts she supplies in the pages of Story, Song and Spirit turn intergenerational worship from a daunting-but-necessary chore into a joyful and completely do-able opportunity. Once you do a few of these, you've got the perfect template for future services of your own creation.

What a wonderful resource to have in planning worship services accessible to all generations! Each service is carefully thought out and also shows what you might want to consider if you are writing your own multi-generational service.

Outstanding book and above and beyond service with a personal touch! Thanks a lot.
