

The book was found

Surviving The Slaughter: The Ordeal Of A Rwandan Refugee In Zaire (Women In Africa And The Diaspora)

Synopsis

In this firsthand account of inexplicable brutality, day-to-day suffering, and survival, Marie Beatrice Umutesi sheds light on the other genocide that targeted the Hutu refugees of Rwanda after the victory of the Rwandan Patriotic Front in 1994. Umutesi's documentation of these years provides the world a history that is still widely unknown. Available in English for the first time, this poignant autobiography is more than a testimony to the lives and humanity lost; it is a call for those responsible for the atrocious crimes - and the devastating silence - to be held accountable.

Book Information

Series: Women in Africa and the Diaspora

Paperback: 284 pages

Publisher: University of Wisconsin Press; 1 edition (October 5, 2004)

Language: English

ISBN-10: 0299204944

ISBN-13: 978-0299204945

Product Dimensions: 6 x 0.8 x 9 inches

Shipping Weight: 14.1 ounces (View shipping rates and policies)

Average Customer Review: 3.9 out of 5 stars 9 customer reviews

Best Sellers Rank: #221,376 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #43 in Books > History > Africa > Central Africa #163 in Books > Biographies & Memoirs > Historical > Africa #169 in Books > Politics & Social Sciences > Politics & Government > International & World Politics > African

Customer Reviews

"I have been through Hell, have known horror, and now that I have escaped... I give testimony to what I have seen." So begins Umutesi's personal account of the bloody ethnic confrontations between Tutsi and Hutu in Rwanda and neighboring Zaire, culminating in the 1994 slaughter of Tutsi and moderate Hutus. A Hutu often "taken for a Tutsi," sociologist Umutesi fled to Zaire in 1994 and spent two years in the refugee camps, witnessing the destruction of the camps and the subsequent ethnic massacres of Hutu refugees by Rwandan soldiers and Zairian rebels. Her tone encompasses both a sociologist's objectivity and a sufferer's anguish, describing malnutrition and famine, cholera and dysentery, panic and brutality. There were two genocides, this book argues, with barbaric acts committed by and against Hutus and permitted by an international community that "seemed more interested in gross acts of war than in the plight of the people being killed every day, of those who were hiding in the ceilings, woods, ditches, and swamps." Acts of kindness and heroism occur, but this is painful, bitter reading. Umutesi is unable to answer the question with which she began "What led us to this extremity?" but her compelling account of that extremity is a valuable historical document. Copyright © Reed Business Information, a division of Reed Elsevier Inc. All rights reserved. --This text refers to an out of print or unavailable edition of this title.

"Testimony so powerful and moving that it reaches an unintended literary greatness."#151;Jan Vansina, "African Studies Review" "Umutesi helps us better understand the fear that has fueled a history of violence between both Tutsi and Hutu Rwanda . . . and the utter failure of the international organizations, governments, and media to tell the truth."#151;Aili Mari Tripp, series editor "Passages of Umutesi" 's book rank with some of the most effective antiwar literature of the twentieth century. "Nicolas van de Walle, "Foreign Affairs"

I thought I knew a lot about what happened in Rwanda between 1990 and 1994 -- and afterwards -- having read some of the original documents (such as Stam & Davenport's research, and the leaked UN "Mapping Report" etc.), as well as knowing some survivors/refugees/exiles personally. None of what was in the recently presented BBC documentary on Kagame was news to me. However, just in the first 40 pages (I have not completed reading the book), she gave me an insight into the complexities of inter-group conflicts leading up to the infamous "100 days" that had escaped me before. She was able to do so because of her travels and relationships within Rwanda and abroad that cut across ethnic (Hutu/Tutsi) and REGIONAL lines, as well as socio-economic lines. She pulls no punches but is remarkably even handed in her descriptions of both Hutu and Tutsi friends and colleagues. The "miracle economy" and "new society" of Rwanda is a fraud, but if the current despotic regime is to be replaced in a peaceful way and former enemies are to find ways to rebuild on a foundation that is not the lie our mass media have been repeating, they must draw upon experiences and insights of people such as Marie Beatrice Umutesi.

Awesome

This is the tragic and triumphant autobiography of a Rwandan Hutu woman who, after living for a couple of years as an internally displaced person in Rwanda and then surviving the horrific conditions in the camps that were - illegally - set up in by the UN in Zaire within shelling distance of the Rwandan border and further down the road in the death camp at Tingi Tingi, decided, along with tens of thousands of others to try to escape from the murderous attacks of Kagame's RPF, UN bounty hunters and Kabila's troops by taking to the roads in an effort to find a way out of the country. She took around ten children, none of them her own, with her and tried, mostly unsuccessfully, to keep them alive during months of trekking through trackless tropical forests during the rainy season, walking barefoot on blistering roads, eating whatever they could scavenge in the deserted villages along the way. We have heard a lot about the tragedy of the Tutsi genocide in 1994. What we haven't heard, partly because the press has been manipulated by the current Tutsi regime in Rwanda and partly because the U. S. continues to count on Kagame to keep our access open to the minerals in Congo - particularly coltan, which is used in cell phones and computers - is that as many Hutu as Tutsi have been killed both before and after 1994. Books like "We Wish to Inform You that Tomorrow We Will Be Killed With Our Families" by Philip Gourevitch were highly misleading and only served to reinforce the mistaken view that all Hutu were genocidal and all Tutsi innocent victims, and as a result the world has let at least 750,000 innocent Hutu be slaughtered while their killers enjoy impunity. And that is not even counting the 3,000,000 Congolese who have died. The first chapters of the book give an overview of the history Rwanda and life in the camps, and the rest of it deals with Umutesi's trek across Zaire. It is even handed, understated, immensely powerful and very timely. It was published in French, Spanish, Catalan and Dutch before being translated into English.

Hutu refugee Marie Beatrice Umutesi recounts her escape from Rwanda into and through Zaire on a path to safety and freedom. You have to read this narrative to get a glimpse of how absolutely powerful and mesmerizing it is. I have read many books dealing with the Rwanda genocide; this one hit me hardest!! offer deep thanks and a hearty congratulations to Marie Beatrice Umutesi and all involved in creating this biting/rivitting/human book.

The book was in bad shape; it was a photocopy

Good personal story for anyone wanting a glimpse of life for those living in Zaire, now Democratic Republic of the Congo, during the turbulent 1990s and forward. And, as of now, the beginning of November, 2012, it has become a war zone again.

Download to continue reading...

Surviving the Slaughter: The Ordeal of a Rwandan Refugee in Zaire (Women in Africa and the Diaspora) From Barefoot to Bishop: A Rwandan Refugee's Journey The African Diaspora: Slavery, Modernity, and Globalization (Rochester Studies in African History and the Diaspora) Artists,

Performers, and Black Masculinity in the Haitian Diaspora (Blacks in the Diaspora) Africa's World War: Congo, the Rwandan Genocide, and the Making of a Continental Catastrophe Africa: African History: From Ancient Egypt to Modern South Africa - Stories, People and Events That Shaped The History of Africa (African Folktales, African ... Africa, Somalia, Nelson Mandela Book 3) South Africa: related: south africa, africa, safari, Kruger, Western Cape, Stellenbosch, Paarl, Cape Town, republic of south africa, campaign Adventuring in East Africa: The Sierra Club Travel Guide to the Great Safaris of Kenya, Tanzania, Rwanda, Eastern Zaire, and Uganda Letters from Zaire: A Peace Corps Life in Africa Rwandan Women Rising The Politics of Passion: Women's Sexual Culture in the Afro-Surinamese Diaspora (Between Men-Between Women: Lesbian and Gay Studies) Ashe, Traditional Religion and Healing in Sub-Saharan Africa and the Diaspora:: A Classified International Bibliography (Bibliographies and Indexes in Afro-American and African Studies) The Africana Bible: Reading Israel's Scriptures from Africa and the African Diaspora Africana Studies: A Survey of Africa And the African Diaspora "New Negroes from Africa": Slave Trade Abolition and Free African Settlement in the Nineteenth-Century Caribbean (Blacks in the Diaspora) Interlopers of Empire: The Lebanese Diaspora in Colonial French West Africa Saltwater Slavery: A Middle Passage from Africa to American Diaspora Every Twelve Seconds: Industrialized Slaughter and the Politics of Sight (Yale Agrarian Studies Series) Tempests and Slaughter (The Numair Chronicles, Book One) Luke Slaughter of Tombstone

Contact Us

DMCA

Privacy

FAQ & Help