Russita delivers again. Finding the humour in the smallest situations, and conveying it perfectly with only a few strokes and even fewer words. Because they are so few, the inclosed meaning becomes even more obvious and vivid. Reading these short stories and feeling with the expressive personalities lets you take a pleasant little break from life`s seriousness. Take in a different, charming perspective on things for a change, while learning some new Russian words at the same time!

Ok, this was cute. I am learning Russian and this was just a cute little book.

Very cute beginning reader!

Funny and easy to read, with an unexpected ending in each story - this book is perfect for inspiring beginning readers to read - and provides the satisfaction of having read an entire book. Every word is carefully selected not to exceed four letters and yet to concisely create an exciting story line. The first story is a touching tale of a struggle and reconciliation between a boy and a fly (hint: note the sun movement in the window;)) - all contained in 10 words. Next we get acquainted with some trees - see if you can recognise them! And next we meet a yak and his charming friends - all created by a witty play on words. Last but not the least comes a story of a poor homeless elephant and his cute helpful friends, with a happy ending that made my kids smile and reread the whole story a couple more times.

That`s a truly inspired book! No doubt Tanja`s books are a source of fascination for children, but grown-ups will also enjoy the subtle humour, the coherence and the clear point of each story. I can hardly live on without more books by Tanja Russita.

I`m happy when my daughter instead asking to read to her insist she will be reading! She enjoys read by herself that never happen before :)
