From the Book: Beer in Dublin Photo by amsher/Frommers.com Community, Dublin's Temple Bar Area Renowned for producing Ireland's most famous export (Guinness), drinking beer is a way of life in Dublin. Despite the high prices, you'll find pubs and traditional alehouses full of happy patrons. Where to Drink: No beer pilgrimage would be complete without the Guinness Storehouse tour, which ends with the requisite free pint in the Gravity Bar. Perhaps the most celebrated beer institution is the Porterhouse and its nine exclusive beers. Throughout Dublin, local brews are served at hundreds of authentic pubs, including Dawson's Lounge, the traditional Stag's Head, and the cool Solas, which has a summer beer garden. Average pint of lager: 4.50 Euro

This book makes a visit to Dublin so easy and enjoyable. I used it all the time on my visit and highly recommend it to anyone going to Dublin. It helps you make the most of your time there and it does not steer you wrong when it comes to food and attraction suggestions. The format is extremely user friendly. Don't go to Dublin without this book!

I bought this guy when I was going to spend only a few days in Dublin, and it was truly wonderful to make the most of my time. It's really easy to understand the routes they give you and the maps are really great. I literally have no sense of orientation and I didn't get lost a single time!

Very valuable in planning our trip. Easy to carry while we are walking and exploring.

Frommer books are great books to take on trips. They are compact and contain a map of the area. The books help you decide what tourist and other interest areas of the city/country you would like to visit to make your trip more enjoyable and interesting.

Usually I love Frommers but this time all it gave was the usual "tourist" information. Nothing interesting or novel. Too mundane.

These books are very helpful. We used them on our trip. They provide lots of ideas and useful maps, etc.

Good book. Perfect size for all day traveling. Book provided right amount of information. Used it everyday while in Dublin.

very helpful in navigating through this remarkable city
